

Playing with Stories:

An intensive with Dr. Kevin Cordi

International/National Coach, Teacher and Performer provides a space for you to have.....

Permission 2 Play

We need to play with the world of story before fashioning the story we tell. Drawing on over 25 years of listening to others' stories, and experimenting and designing narrative work with playful exercises, Cordi will share new methods of story crafting from his recently released book Playing with Stories: Story Crafting for Writers, Teachers, Storytellers, and other Imaginative Thinkers (2014). "Story building does not have to be a solo act," says Cordi. Join Cordi as he, "demonstrates how we can engage and help each other build story awareness." Come with an idea, not a complete story. Bring a story that gives you, "Permission 2 Play."

Cordi is a national/international practitioner of play. His award-winning work has been commissioned by The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, The Qatar Foundation International in the Middle East, The International Book Festival in Singapore, and Newsweek, among others. He has won Story Slams in New York and Louisiana as well as taught storytelling for The Ohio State University, Judson University, and Ohio Dominican University. He holds a Doctorate in Storytelling and Story Making from OSU, but his real doctorate comes from listening to so many others, young and old alike, as he travels to over 40 states, England, Japan, Canada, Singapore, Scotland, and Qatar. His fast-paced, improvisational story-based work is not common in theater circles and storytelling clubs. He juxtaposes and fuses these arts.
